Think of a huge mandarin, easy to peel and seedless, with firm flesh that melts in the mouth, an intense sweetness balanced by refreshing acidity, and a complex, lingering mandarin orange aroma. I’ve tasted more than 1,000 varieties of citrus, and to me [it’s] the most delicious.

HISTORY

BORN IN JAPAN, RAISED IN CALIFORNIA

This rare seedless variety was originally cultivated in the 1970’s by a citrus grower from Kumamoto Prefecture in Japan who set out to develop the ultimate citrus.

He combined the best of easy-to-peel Japanese varieties with big, juicy sweet oranges from California.

Over many years, his hard work paid off and the variety became the most prized fruit in Japan and Korea.

Seedlings of the fruit were first imported into the US in 1998, but because Sumo Citrus is one of the most challenging varieties to grow, it wasn’t until 2011 that they became available to the public.
THERE’S ONLY ONE SUMO CITRUS, HERE’S WHY:

SUPER-SWEET
ENORMOUS
EASY TO PEEL
NO MESS
SEEDLESS NAMING

• Sumo Citrus is a hybrid derived from Pomelo, Navel, and Mandarin.

• The variety was dubbed ‘dekopon’ in Japan in reference to its distinctive top knot. In Korea, it is referred to as ‘hallabong.’

• However, not every dekopon is a Sumo Citrus, only those meeting the enormously delicious standards in both size and taste.

GREAT THINGS REQUIRE GREAT EFFORT

DEDICATED CITRUS GROWERS

Only the expert growers of Sumo Citrus growers are able to cultivate this difficult-to-grow fruit. Growers maintain the highest growing standards possible.

HIGH STANDARDS/TESTING

Not every fruit can be considered a Sumo Citrus, only fruit that measures up in size and taste. Farmers have to consistently walk their fields and determine which pieces of fruit are good enough to be called Sumo Citrus.

PACKING & STORING

Every single piece of Sumo Citrus grown in North America is gently cleaned and hand-packed and stored in our legacy packing facility. Each Sumo Citrus is consistency tested on the Brix meter to ensure maximum sweetness.

WHAT’S THE BRIX METER?

Citrus taste is technically measured in terms of degrees Brix, Titratable Acid (“TA”), and the Brix-to-acid ratio. Brix and TA measure the sugar content and acidity, respectively, of a liquid solution. Sumo Citrus has a very high sugar to acid ratio, providing an incredible sweetness.
